Martha Hackett M.D.

Becoming an honest and keen observer of self will illuminate where you are. Quieting the ‘monkey-chatter’ of your mind will allow you to listen to the wisdom you hold. Freeing yourself from reactivity lets you see every life experience as an opportunity to learn. In doing these, you will begin to live the joy and the peace that you seek.

Quote: “I am happy to admit I do things differently when it comes to money and helping people manage it. I flip the script on traditional financial planning by addressing emotional and situational pieces with my clients first. To achieve success, it’s important to look inward and ask, “Am I committed to success or just doing business as usual?” Being committed to success means to have mental determination to accept only excellence; no matter how difficult; no matter how uncomfortable; no matter how stressful. Remember, “Your success tomorrow is in direct proportion to your ‘Commitment to Excellence’ today.”™

Guy Colangelo
Chief Marketing Officer/Celebrity Branding Agency

There are two fundamental laws of marketing that you must live by if you want your marketing to work FOR you. Law #1: Marketing Should Make You Money. If it’s not making you money, don’t spend the money on it. Otherwise, you are just stealing from your bottom line. Law #2: Marketing IS Selling. You are not a “Big Brand” so stop acting like it. Your marketing should be selling what you have to offer in every interaction your prospect has with you.
